TO A WIFE,

(During a period of severe indisposition.) BY CORNELITS NEALS.

I mid I would love thee in want or in wealth Through cloud and through suashine, in sickness, and health; And fear not my love, when thy spirits are weak,

The troth I have plighted I never will break. Are sickness, but sickness it touches the heart With a fieling, where how many seelings have

"But who is this that cometh forth from the tomb—with dyed garments from the bed of death?" He that is glorious in his appearance, walking in the greatness of his strength? It is thy Prince, O Zion,—Christians! it is your Lord. He hath trodden the wine press alone; he hath stained his raiment with blood; but now, on the first born from the womb of nature, he meets the morning of his resurrection! he arises a comparior from the grave; he returns with blessings from the world of spirits; he brings alration to the sons of men. Never did the returning san sake in a day so glorious! it was the jubilee of the out; or a did the descent rejoice; the firee of nature was glaidened before him, when the blessings of the Eternal descended as the dew of heaven for the refreshing of the nations."

We can only express our thoughts of the Crestor in the works of his creation; and the brightest of these can only give us some faints alsows of his greatness and his glory. The strongest figures at all to the majerty and dignity of the divise attributes, except the sacre

SYMPATHY.

"Come then with me thy mercure jain,
"And ease my wees by telling these."

It is a pure stream that swells the tide of sympathy—it is an excellent heart that interests itself in the feelings of others—it is a heaves-like disposition that engages the affections, and extorts the sympathetic tear for the misfortunes of a friend—Mankind are ever subject to itle, information and disappointments. Every breast, at some particular period, expresences sorrow and distress. Pains and perplexities area long-lived plagues of human existence, but sympathy in the bulm that healthese wounds. If a person, who has host a precious friend, can find another who will feelingly participate in his misfortune, he is well sigh eampersated for his loss. And delightful is the task, to a feeling mind, of softening the painful pillow of the sick, amusing the thoughts of the unhappy, and alleviating the tortures of the afflicted.

THINGS AS THEY SHOCLD BE.

1. Such is the improvement in the morals of th children and younger classes in society, that searcely an oath is heard, and little fighting or disorder is seen,

2. The poorer orders are generally inc nd frugal. The taverns have very few vis and a drunkard has become quite a rarity.

3. Our females are paragons of modesty nay has them at any hour, and no impudent ee marks are made by them. They seem really to ave discovered that they can recelves quite as well to the notice of the respectable part of the community, by mais dignity of their own sex, as by wearing brazes faces, and loose tongues and dress.

of wasting their estates as formerly in sens mality, are devising and prosecuting plans for meliorating the distresses of their less favoured fellow-beings; and you see them now searching out meritorio indigence, and enjoying " the luxury of doing good." The grateful song of the widow and the rphan is their music, and they had rather shed tears of humanity over real distress, than psy like fools for theatrical or romantic representations of it. 5. Scarcely any churches building, but much ORSERVED practical piety.

ON THE VALUE OF HEALTH.

The possession of good health is one of those blessings the value of which we are too apt lightly to appreciate until we are stretched on the bed of sickness, and made a prey to the pains of the body, heightened by the distresses of the mind. That buoyancy of spirit which gave elasticity to every step in the day of strength, is torn away from our hold in the period of sickness, and the limbs are rendered as nerveless and weak as the decayed branch of a tree before the blast of autumn. The countenance loses all its varied expression, and those lineaments that gave forth the sentiments of the inmost soul, now indicate nothing but insensibility, apathy, or pain. Sickness reduces the strong man to weakness and helplessness of a chitd, leaving him at the same time a portion of thought and judgment sufficient only to aggravate the misery of his condition Such a state is but the union of infant weakness with manly mind; and the struggle is ness with manly mind; and the struggle is painful to bear, until the equilibrium is restored, either by the restoration of good bealth to calm the sgitated mind, or by the prostrating of the mental powers to a level with the bodily weakness.

If we examine with a curious eye, we must be associated in the first thread in which have the deeped for plant of the second control of the second contro

The lawyer has contemplated all the bearings of an important case, and laid out every point and authority in their proper places in his mind—but a fit of sickness, brought on by some triffing incident, comes upon him unawares, and sveeps away every vestige of that intellectual superstructure. The tongue of eloquence, while it discourses on the things of eternity, may be shrivelled at the approach of tickness; and the hand of charity may be withered, as it reaches to the restriction of the street of the street. es out its pittance to the son of misfo

But the enjoyment of our existence is felt in the highest degree during a period of good health. Every feeling plays its part, and every thought does its duty.—
The rising of the sun is beheld with a degree of pleasure bordering on rapture, and his sinking down in the West creates a metascholy sentiment, indeed, but with pleasure, however, for the better half of its comnaction. The waves of the ocean, chasing position. The waves of the ocean, chasis one another over the bosom of the bound-less deep, give the imagination, as well as the senses, an inexpressible delight; and the clouds, of various colors, travelling over ible delight; and the blue vault of Heaven, present a perpe-tual feast to the fancy, and dispel all gloomy forebodings from that delightful faculty-Fine weather is a luxury: and good health can only enjoy it.

SINGULAR DIALOGUE.

When we remark that the following facetious dialogue, (cxtracted from a very scarce work,) is from the admirable pen of the late Dr. Sheridan, of literacy memory, we say enough to induce the reader to peruse it with attention. The author was on a visit to a distant relation, a sprightly female, who had been married about ten years reader to persse it with attention. The author was on a visit to a distant relation, a sprightly female, who had been married about ten years.—
Her husband was a bon vivine, who loved his bottle, and provided he could enjoy the present moment, never thought of the next. "We were introduced," says the author, "and found the table covered with etcellent visinds, and a bottle of apaching champaign. This tunation was for a moment darkened by an envious cloud, which sumetimes derkene the matrimonial sky—even the must server. When the husband entered, the following conversation commenced." (Mr. Sheridan calls it a "Receipt to heav a Storm.")

Husband. Women—aye!—Nife. You are always raining at our aux.—II. And without a reason!—W. Without either rhyme or reason; you'd be misorable beings without us, for all that.—II.—Sometimes; I could same some very good women.—W. Without the head, I suppose!—H. With a head, and with a feart too.—W. That's a wonder.—H. It would be a still greater, if I could sait; for instance, there's Mrs. Dawson, the best of wires; always at home, whose, you call, always at home, wheney was call, always.

for instance, there's Mrs. Dawon, the best of wives; always at home, whenever you call, always seat and clean, soher and discreet.—W I wish you were tied to her!—Always at home! the greatest gossip in the parish; she may well amile, she has onthing to ruffle her temper:—seat and clean—she has nothing to do but keep herself an —soler,—she can take a glass as well as her neighbours; discreyr,—that's another word—but I detest scandal; I'm surprised you don't say she is Asadesize!—W. So she is in my eyes.—W. You've a fine eye, to be sure; you're an excellent judge of beauty; what do you think of her nose!—W. She recarry: what do you think of her nose:—II. She is a fine woman in spite of her nose.—II. Pine feathers make fine fowls: she can paint her withered checks, and pencil her cycbrows.—II. You can do the same, if you please.—IV. My checks do not want paint, nor my cyc-brows penciling.—II. True: the rose of beauty is on your checks, and your brow is the bow of Cupid.—IV. You once your brow is the bow of Cupid:—IF. You once thought so; but that moving munminy Molly Dawson is your favorite. She's—let the see—no gossip; and yet she's found in every house but her own; she is so silent, too, when she has all the clack to berself; her tongue is as thin as a sixpence with talking; with a pair of eyes burnt in the sacket, and painted pannels too! and then, as to scandal,—but her tongue's no scandal!—H—
Take care, there's such a thing as standing in a white sheet.—W. By—! you would provoke a saint!—H. You seem to be getting into a passion.

—W. Is it a wonder? A white sheet! You ought to be tossed in a blanket. Handsome! I can't forget that word; my charms are lost upon such a senseless feltow as you.—H. The charms of your tongue!—W. Bon't provoke me, or I'll fing this dish at your head.—H. Well, I have done. H'. But I have not done: I wish I had drowned myself the first day I saw you.—H. It is not too late.—
H. I'd see you hung first:—H. You'd be the first to cut me down—W. Then I ought to be tied up in your stead.—H. I'd cut you down.—
W. You would!—H. Yes, but I'd take care you were dead first.—W. I can't bear this any longer! W You would :— N. Yes, but I'd take care you were dead first — W. I can't bear this any longer — H. Then it is time for me to withdraw; I see by your eyes that the storm is collecting — W.—And it shall burst on your head — H. I'll save my poor head, if I can. A good retreat is better than a bad battle. (Husband flees, the dish flees for him.)

POR THE SATURDAY EVERING POST,

OCLUBOTANIA.

PRENCH TAVERNS The interior economy of our own taverns eight, in many respects, be bettered by an imi-ation of our Gallie neighbours. No Parisian enters their public dining rooms without taking off his hat, and howing to the presiding diety of the bar. Taking his place in silence, and perusing the closely printed folio carte with a penetration proportioned to its bewildering diversity, he finally akes his selection, writes down the articles of his closice, and even the quantity of each, so as to prevent all mistake, upon slips of paper, deposited on every table for that purpose, hands the record to an attendant, and betakes himself patiently to a newspaper until his orders appear before him in all their smoking reality. There is rarely any calling of the waiter, and there are no bells to ring, the number and activity of the attendants generally rendering both processes unnecessary. If occasionally absent, the edge of a knife tapped againsts wing glass forms a fairy bell quite sufficient to summon them to their posts, although I could never divine by what auricular sympathy they recognize the chime of every table. Shortly after dancer the guests call for coffee, and betake thembelves, with a valedictory bow, to their own avocations or the theatres in winter, to a promenside or a chair in some of the bow, to their own avocations or the theatres in winter, to a promensde or a chair in some of 'the public gardens if it be in the summer. Ladies of the first respectability are habitual diners at the restaurateurs, contributing, as might be expected, to the perfect decorum of the assemblage, and even (as might not be expected,) to its since. Surely some of these coffee-house amenities might be beneficially imported, especially the temperance from a country where wine, instead of six or eight shillings, costs exactly that number of pence perbottle. I recommend to my countrymen, that this "be in their flowing cups freely remembered."

THE WRY MOUTH.

Renard, a physician of Paris, piqued simself on his extraordinary sharp-sightedness. One day on calling to visit a patient, he found an old abbe playing a sober game at piquet with him. "What are you doing here, monsieur l'Abbe?" exclaimed Renard: " go home and get bled imme diately. You have not a moment to lose. The abbe was so terrified by this address, that he was unable to stir; he was, there that he was unable to stir; he was, therefore, conveyed home and put to bed. Ref nard followed him, and directed that he should be bled three or four times; he then prescribed an emetic, and every time he called, he freed the after wars and worse.
On the third day, the patient's location was

SKELETONS.

he Museum at Dubnis on of a grampue, fi pended the skeleton of a grampus, aften etwenty feet in length. The pre-parations in this museum are numerous and valuable: among these are two rare and celebrated specimens. One of these is the skeleton of one Clark, a native of Cork, who it is said was a young man of surpring strength and agility; but having once laid a night in a field, after indulging in great dissipation, the left part of his body began to easily, and the process continued, by slow degrees, untavery part grew into a bony substance, excepts, his skin, eyes and entrails. His joints became stiffened, so, that he could neither bend his body lie down nor rise up without assistance; who placed upright, like a statue, he could not move so more than if dead. No memoring breeze faus the fortid atmosphere of a jail, an companions but murderers and thieves commute with the debtor; no wife, no children; they are separated from him; his image hasses them through the day, his midnight apparition "disturbs the slumber of the cradle." He feels "that the world is not his friend, nor the world's laws; yes he imagines the world is his tomb, in which he uniat retain a living consciousmess of his interment from him family and society."

To be born a slave, and live a slave, is better than to be born a freeman to be brought up in invincible love of liberty, but to live in disgrace and contempt in a jail. Where is the scholar who can read Johnson's description of the unhappy fate of his beloved authors in this world, without indignation?

Thuse who refuse to pay have been imprisoned. The writer here mentions the names of severa gentlemen who have been imprisoned. The American Consul has also been threatened, but American Consul has also been threatened, but remains as yet immolested. All the ressels in Malaga are embargored. Many of the vineyards have been have and entirely destroyed—one of 5000 fanegas of grapes. In fine, the present is the reign of terror at Malaga. The destruction of the timeyards was conducted by the Saranos, destinations of the timeyards was conducted by the Saranos, of the timeyards was conducted by the Saranos. thousand Forech troops are now advancing on Malaga from St. Marya. Riego has about 6000 men at Metoga, and we momently expect to hear of a hattle. Gen. Charles La lemand and Sir Robert Wilson leave this to-night for Malaga, to join Reigo. The French army are to a certain degree disaffected. We have here three Prench officers who have described from the army before Cartindisall-ated. We have here three Piench afficers who have deserted from the army before Cariz.—
The Prench have made several attacks on that city, all of which have failed, as has also one a few days since on Tarriffa under the young General Lauriston. General Tarriffa, with 30:00 men, is at Alicant, in good sparis. All the strong places, say Cadiz, M. Schastians, Pigueris, Pampelona, Birechona, and Malega, continue in possession of the Constitutionalists. Both Piance and Spain have simultaneously requested the meda. Spain have simultaneously requested the media-tion of England to aetile the affair. The French aginy in Spain is certainly less popular than it was, since their pockets are empired and necessity has compelled them to resort to contributions from the Spaniards."

A letter received from Gibraltar, dated September 3d, states that the French had been repulsed at Tariffa, with the loss, it was eported, of 800 men. The writer adds, Malaga is in a dreadful state at present; the commander has made a requisition of 100,000 dollars of the merchants-several who refused to pay, have been sent to prison, among them the American Consul. And several have been shot. The English frigate Tribune is to proceed from here to bring the English merchants from that

Your cor respondent only knows of their existence, from having met with a pamphlet entitled, "Observaions on a Sermon delivered at Newark," &c. by Veritas-and though the solitary copy of this, that ound its way into our country within a week, is me of the 2nd edition, your correspondent had not before beard that such an interesting discussion of the most interesting subjects, had taken place-As a second edition is on sale, it is evident it sells rivere it is known: and if known, it would sell wherever Bble accieties have been formed, or herever they have begged for money !- It would all wherever there are mothers who have buries infant children, wherever the doctrines of original sin and unconditional election and reprobation has been preached, and wherever there are men, like the Bereaus of old, who " searched the scriptures o see whether those things are so "

Booksellers should advertise such tracts : they can have no idea of the interest they excite in minds that love truth, -or rather in minds that are hungry and athirst." MRK. s.

COMMUNICATION. Messrs, Editors,

During the prevalence of the epidemic which ha extended itself through a large portion of our ountry, no place has suffered more, in proportion to its inhabitants, than Prankford and its vicinity Various success has attended the treatment of the disorder-numbers have died-several lately have gone to their eternal home. But is it not inconsis ent with common sense, to imagine that the sk ll of the Physician can rescue those from the jaws of death, whom God has decreed shall depart to be here no more. Several have been so unjust as to censure a worthy and respectable practitioner of that villa. Dr. L. has hitherto met with astonish-Divine Providence, a few have fallen victims to the disease, why should blame be attached to Dr. L. Every one knows that Dr. L. is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, one of the most real able Medical schools in the world. He is considered by all Mudical men who have the pleasure of his acquaintance, to be a practitioner of the first merit: I will also add his having ten years expe rience in the practice of medicine in its various

I think I have now offered enough in defence of the gentleman in question, and if there are any who still are prejudiced against this respectable practitioner, I have only to refer them to the cases in which the skill of a Physic, a Chapman, and a Rush has proved unavailing.

Mrs. Chapman begs leave to inform those who may have the minfortune to have slaughters efflicted with standarding, that she receives helies to der her care; she, being for acventees year's been a teacher of the various branches which constitute an English education, will, if required, instruction young ladies who may be placed with her, in any of the useful branches; they can likewise be mitructed in Music, Prench, Drawing of Maps and Panting on Velvet. Parents and guardians may reat assured that every attention will be paid by Mr. and Mrs. C. not only to their acquiring a currect and easy articulation, but likewise to their morals and deportment.

Mr. C. will also instruct pump gentlemen in such branches so they may evquire. Papies will have the use of Maps, Glubes, and a Library of well selected bonds.

Those persons, who are anxious to be cured of neil selected banks.

Those persons, who are anxious to be curred of stramering, will no doubt be gratified with a peruval of the americal extracts of certificates and letters, the originals of which can be seen by calling on Mr. C. and reference given to the authors. The stations which some gentlemen hold in society will not admit of their names being merted in the public papers, therefore, such, extracts as have health and the private of the property of the parties have requested privates but have no objection to an interview with individuals who may be desirous of conversing with them.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman residing in Philadelphia to a gentleman efficied with an empetated of speech.

Wainst I was pursoning the application, I was not prevented attending to institute the period to any measurementer, it is calculated to promove the attainment of a perfect and easy Articulation. If fore I knew Mr. Chapman, I stateward so much as to the nearly deprived of the pleasures arising from social intercourse, and to be almost measuremented for the transaction of public horsons; I could not talk five minutes without courses; I could not talk five minutes without course as a peak for hours without me, at present t can speak for hours without my person being able to perceive that I i ave out any person being able to perceite that I i are ever been troubled with stammering. Extract of a lesser to Mr Brackish Price, of Bal-tinore, from his correspondent in Philadelphia, previous to his placing his on with Mr (hap-man Philadelphia, Sept 7, 1822. Su—On the receipt of yours of the 29th til. I called on Mr Chapman for the purpose of obtaining as much indocumnism on the subject of your letter as I possibly could. After some conversa-tion with him, he put into my hands his printed testimonials, at the same time referring me to in-dividuals in the city, who could attest to the wa-lidity of his pretensions to a knowledge of the testimonials, at the same time referring me to individuals in the city, who could attest to the validity of his pretensions to a knowledge of the mode of effectually removing impediments of speech; he has relieved a number in this place, but his greatest core was in the case of a gentleman in one of our Basks, upon whom I called, but he being confined to his room with sickness, of course did not see hom. I however learned from some of his friends, that he had been entirely relieved from an inverterate and confirmed impediment in his speech by attending to Mr. Chapman's course of instruction: other cases were mentioned which were morabinated by the testimony of those on whom I called, and judging from these facts, as well as from Mr. Chapman's character and standing in society. I have no doubt of his ability to accomplish what he promises: his plan of instruction is kept secret, so that we can firm no idea of its plausibility, further than judging by its effect, which if successful in all cases that come under his notice, it is sufficient, let the method be what it may. On the whole I would say, that the result of my coquiries has impressed on my united so much confidence in his ability, that were I afflicted with the complaint in question, I should at once make trial of his skill, with the hope of being relieved.

Philadelphia, Feb. 20, 1823. I do hereby certify, that having been afflicted from my infancy with a very obstinate impediment in my speech, I came to this city about four trouths ago for the purpose of attending Mr. Chapman's course of application for the benefit of persons troubled with stammering, i.e. In a very short time I found considerable relef, and having completed and ended to the complete of the co fail to give immediate relief to those troubled speech, and consequently will finally ensure a per lect cure. Mr. H'm. Chapman, Sir—In answer to your enquiries as respects my opinion of the advantages derived by Mr. Tho. J.
Price of Baltimore, in attending your course of instruction, I would say that the impediment under which he had isboured for many years prior to his coming to this city, was entirely rem-seed previous to how-leaving it. When I take into view the short time he was under your care, I cannot help concluding, that your system is admirably calculated to remove that very distressing malady, the inability of expressing our thoughts. With my best wishes for your weffare in a cause so the mability of expressing our thoughts. With my best wishes for your weifare in a cause so justly entitled to marit, I remain your most obedient servant.
